Ref; IRU Load Securing Course.

Dear Mr Gill,

I have been in the Transport industrial for over 30 years from driven trucks in both the UK and Europe and loading all types of loads from group age to wide loads and low-loader work.

When I started I was lucky as at that time the older drivers would take you under there care and you'd get the basics from them. Now a days that's not happening which is a major problem.

This is the first time I have seen the problems of loading a vehicle addressed, when you think the job of a truck / van etc..... Is taken a load from one place to another it is important to know how to secure the load you are transporting.

I found this course very good and well delivered and very interesting, with over 30 years on the job; I have taken a lot from the course and standards to work from.

All drivers do one day a year Drivers CPC training, this is a course the RSA should list as part of the drivers CPC training.

I can only finish up by saying; it was the best course I have been on in a long time and it's a most do for all drivers as it makes you think about what that loads going to do when you are sitting up in that cab.

Kind regards
